Woman's World

SHE EARNS $10,000 A YEAR.

Miss Katherine I. Harrison, Private Secretary to the Late H. H. Rogers.

Katherine I. Harrison, private secretary to the late H. H. Rogers, is harder to reach than J. P. Morgan, James Stillman, John W. Gates or any other of the kings of finance. She is the one woman in the world who knows everything that goes on in Standard Oil. For doing what she is required to do—and not the least of her duties is to keep her mouth sealed—she receives $10,000 a year. You might count on your fingers the women in the United States who receive this salary.

What made Katherine I. Harrison so valuable to H. H. Rogers and his partners in the Standard Oil? A hundred answers could be given to this question. Other women are as bright, and other women are possessed of equal executive ability. But the best answer of them all may be summed up in two words—absolute trustworthiness.

Miss Harrison can keep a secret. She can hold information inviolate that would make a poor man a millionaire.
